

PROBLEMS

Time and funding constraints have slowed the activities of some subcommittees. The input from all subcommittees is essential to the success of SJRMP. Input is needed in its own right as well as in response to actions recommended by other subcommittees. Efforts have been made to correct this situation but to date have been unsuccessful.

Another problem encountered by SJRMP is the lack of a clearly defined procedure for determining exactly when a proposal has been adequately dealt with.

Progress of SJRMP is also complicated by proposals that are developing at different rates and with different degrees of detail. The result is products which are not easily compared or prioritized.
